Event to be Conducted Late in October as Climax

OPEN MEETING FRIDAY

Party Women Arranging Tea at Hunsicker's

Democratic organizations, men and women, are busy drafting programs that will carry them to the eve of the election Nov. 3. The pre-election activity will be climaxed with a gigantic torch light parade and rally late in October, probably within three or four days of the voting.

Candidates, directors of the Pickaway County Democratic Club and county chairmen gathered in party headquarters in the American Hotel Monday evening to arrange for an open meeting next Friday evening in the courthouse. Clark Hunsicker, representative in the general assembly, will obtain an outstanding speaker for the meeting which will start at 8 o'clock.

The Democratic Club has appointed Joe W. Adkins Jr., and George Gerhardt as a publicity committee.

Mary G. Morris, chairman of the Democratic Women's Club, Tuesday urged all members of the organization, especially newly appointed committeewomen, to attend the open meeting.

The women's organization is planning a tea Friday evening Oct. 1 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, W. Union street. The tea will precede an evening meeting at the courthouse. Men and women will be welcome at the tea.

Another activity planned by the club is to maintain "open house" in party headquarters during the Pumpkin Show.

To Revive NRA?

THE New Deal's struggle over whether to revive the NRA idea in event of President Roosevelt's re-election broke into the open when Maj. George L. Berry, above, the president's "co-ordinator for industrial co-operation," issued a call for his council members to meet in Washington the week of Dec. 9. The purpose, according to Berry's letter to his council members, is to prepare a program to meet "the intolerable situation precipitated by the supreme court's interpretation of the chief representative of organized labor among presidential appointees."

HEARST ATTACK IS PLANNED BY F. D. R. TONIGHT

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 29.—(UP)—President Roosevelt has been aroused by the bitter campaign attacks of his opponents, it was reported today, and will fire "a full broadside" in his first campaign speech before the Democratic State convention in Syracuse tonight.

The exact nature of his address tonight was not known, but observers expected Mr. Roosevelt to continue his controversy with Publisher William Randolph Hearst by striking hard at charges that he was being supported by organizations and individuals inimical to the American form of government and that he bought their aid.

It was understood that for some time, Mr. Roosevelt's advisers had urged him to reply to the frequent attacks of his opponents, but that he had decided to reserve his replies for the speech tonight and those that will follow during October.

Mr. Roosevelt leaves Hyde Park this morning and arrives in Syracuse this afternoon at 4. His speech tonight, the opening of his personal re-election campaign, will pave the way for more in which he plans to discuss what he considers the paramount issues.

Tuesday when the automobiles of Gayle Wolf, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wolf, N. Court street, and Mrs. May Beame, S. Washington street, collided. The accident happened at Court and High streets.

Witnesses said Wolf was driving his Chevrolet coupe south on Court street, enroute to school, and Mrs. Beame, driving north on Court, started to turn into W. High street. Her car, a Ford V-8, crossed the path of Wolf's machine, the right front fender of the Beame car and the right rear fender of the Wolf car being damaged. Both cars slid on the wet pavement.

Young Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Morris, and Miss Riegel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Riegel, were riding with Wolf. Both were thrown to the pavement when the right door of the automobile was thrown open by the impact.

Morris was treated in a physician's office for a cut over his right eye. Miss Riegel was bruised about the body as a result of her fall to the pavement. Neither Mrs. Beame nor Wolf was hurt.

HORSE, MULE MEAT SUSTAINED REBELS BESIEGED IN ALCAZAR, SOLDIER REVEALS

By REYNOLDS PACKARD

Copyright 1936 by United Press

TALAVERA DE LA REINA, Sept. 29.—(UP)—A gaunt, emaciated army lieutenant of 25 years, told in the Nationalist (rebel) base hospital today the story of the siege of the Alcazar.

Suffering from wounds and malnutrition, one of the first men to be evacuated from the fortress palace, he told me his own story of the most heroic siege of recent times, how a garrison of men, women and children held out for ten weeks under constant fire, pledged never to surrender, to resist so long as one man lived.

They lived on horse meat, saw by candle light in the deep rock cellars, responded at intervals day and night to emergency alarms to meet loyalist attacks, ate mule meat when the horse meat gave out—yet danced to radio music as they listened to the miners of the besieging force drill tunnels from which the miners planned to blast the Alcazar to bits.

Mayor W. J. Graham in discussing the meeting expressed himself as strongly opposed to any plan that would eliminate a district nurse in Circleville. For many years efforts have been made to consolidate the two health organizations here.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 29.—(UP)—The eastern half of the Rocky Mountain region today counted the cost of its most severe September snow storm in at least 61 years at 13 deaths and an estimated $80,000,000 property damage.

Denver alone had an estimated property damage of $7,000,000, done to trees, shrubbery, building and utility property, while the damage to crops and orchards in Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico could only be guessed at.

A series of automobile, airplane and other accidents brought 13 deaths since Friday night, when the storm first struck as a dust blizzard before turning to rain and later to snow.

in the Alcazar even before the siege July 21, four days after the outbreak of the civil war.

The rebel garrison was able to hold out only because of 250 horses and mules they had and which they used for soup and meat. With the resimle of fat they made candles.

Lying back weakly in his hospital bed, Katina said:

"It was those horses and mules, comprising the entire supply of the civil guard squadron of the Toledo area, that made it possible

PARENTS ASSAIL TEAR GAS USE

Campbell, O., Schoolground Abandoned as Pupils Continue Strike

CAMPBELL, O., Sept. 29.—(UP)—The third day of a student strike here found Memorial High School ground almost deserted today. Only a few pupils entered the building when classes opened for the day.

Parents of striking students, who have protested transfer of a high school teacher to a grade school, added support to the walk-out after a mass meeting last night. Michael Graban, senior class adviser, was the teacher transferred.

Police, who yesterday routed a group of students with tear gas bombs, were on duty at the high school today.

The Campbell school board met secretly last night but its action was not disclosed. It was indicated, however, that members were deadlocked over the strike.

Graban attended a board meeting. Afterwards he said: "I'm going to have it out here and now." He made no other statement.

A crowd of 500 stood outside the high school building last night, expecting the board meeting to be held there. The meeting was held at another place, however.

Mayor John Borak criticized the use of tear gas by Police Chief Frank Cunningham and his officers.

NAZIS TO ADD 300,000 MORE MEN TO ARMIES

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—(UP)—Nazi Germany announced today the early formation of eight new army divisions and provided for an increase in its labor corps to 300,000 men within the next three years.

The new army divisions are necessary because of the recent degree for two-year military service. Their size is not known. At full strength the divisions would total 104,000 men but it is believed they will not reach this total.

From an estimated 200,000 men, the labor corps is to be increased to 230,000 by October, 1937; to 230,000 by October, 1938 and to 300,000 by October, 1939.

It was decreed also that the building up of a labor organization for women toward an eventual compulsory status be started.

TEXANS FEARING NEW DAMAGE BY FLOODED RIVERS

WACO, Tex., Sept. 29.—(UP)—The turbulent, rain-fed streams of Texas drained from flooded areas today, but took a new threat to downstream lowlands already flooded in the last two weeks.

The Brazos and the Colorado rivers and their bank-bursting tributaries rushed toward the Gulf of Mexico and in Milan, Brown and McCulloch counties residents feared new floods.

Lowland dwellers south of here took no chance, and left their homes quickly, although destruction was not expected to equal earlier havoc in Waco and other communities.

a day. The men, however, gladly gave up some of their ration for the women, and particularly for a mother and two babies.

Women Courageous

"All the women were heroines. They refused to enjoy extra rations of food. They were magnificent in face of constant danger and almost nightly attacks."

To understand the situation of the garrison it is necessary to remember that the Alcazar is not merely a single building but a group of buildings, with a number of narrow streets and a high cliff overlooking the Tagus. The Alcazar proper, the central building, was reduced to ruins in the siege, and from these ruins the rebels fought off attacks while the living quarters were far down in the dark rock cellars of the old palace. "Besides the horses and mules," said Katina, "we also managed to capture 200 sacks of grain which were in a storehouse outside the Alcazar but which we dominated. From this we made black bread. It was as hard as stone, almost," (Continued on Page Eight)

The court found two other defendants, who had waived jury trials, guilty in the lesser degree.

The battle started in the Strait of Gibraltar when the rebel cruiser Almirante Cervera attacked the loyalist destroyers Almirante Juan Fernandez and Gravina off Cape Spartel.

The destroyers accepted the battle. The Almirante Cervera, taking a position at the Atlantic entrance to the strait, opened fire with his heaviest cannon, damaging the Almirante Juan Fernandez, which was forced to withdraw from the combat and steam back through the strait in the direction of Malaga.

The Almirante Cervera then turned its attention to the Gravina, which it crippled and sank.

GIRL SCOUTS

During Pumpkin Show at the Junior Fair, the Girl Scouts are going to show the public how Scouting is applied in a practical way.

The moral standing of this organization is well known. It's promise, laws, and motto are factors toward the making of fine character.

To become a Tenderfoot Scout a girl must learn simple trail signs to aid her in the woods, know how to tie the useful knots, and know something of the history of and respect due to the flag. These requirements are simple, and, after passing them, the girl is urged to go farther toward becoming an intelligent and valuable citizen.

More woodcraft is taught; nature study, first aid, and domestic arts are among the many requirements for Second Class.

By this time the girl has developed definite interests and she is encouraged to work for merit badges in these lines. She is now given certain responsibilities such as training Tenderfeet, performing services to the community, and planning hikes to be taken by the whole troop.

In addition she learns to make maps, pitch tents, to signal, swim, and to do many other valuable activities.

For the athletic girl, there are fields open in archery, horsemanship, swimming, lifesaving, and numerous others. For the nature lover, there are the badges of Bird Finder, Observer, Star Finder, and Wild Flower Finder—in fact, any girl can develop her hobby.

And the girls of Pickaway County have been doing just this. Their work will be on display at the Junior Fair, and you will be pleased to see what girls from ten to eighteen years of age are doing. The youth of the county is doing its part toward good tomorrow.

HITLER'S "GREATNESS"
DAVID LLOYD GEORGE's conclusion, expressed following a pleasant visit to Germany, that Adolf Hitler is one of the truly great men of modern times will be accepted with reservations by those who have followed thoughtfully the career of the Chancellor since his star began to ascend.

He may be one of the great men of the day, as Lloyd George professes to believe, but at the same time he is under the domination of violent phobias that make his dictatorship a menace to world peace and to the rights and well-being of every German subject.

Hitler's hatred of Russia is unbridled and in a dozen ways during recent weeks he has been guilty of incitements to war.
An equally violent and unreasoning obsession is his hatred of Jews. While he succeeds in keeping his antagonism toward Catholicism under a fair degree of restraint, this feeling, nevertheless, exists and flares forth at frequent intervals.

While Hitler's absorption with ancient Teutonic mythology and his frequently expressed desire to utilize it as the basis for a new religion suggest the need of psychopathic attention, his detestation of democracy and his worship of military power are further evidences of neurotic inclinations.

It would be interesting, in the light of his classification of Herr Hitler, to learn Lloyd George's conception of true greatness. The justice of attributing its qualities to one whose philosophy is so essentially destructive is questionable, at best.

WOODEN FOOD

THE revelation that Professor Friedrich Bergius, noted Heidelberg chemist, has perfected a process for converting wood-waste—of which sawdust is the best example—into synthetic food will not whet the appetite of gourmets but it does arouse some thoughts on its significance and possibilities.
Processors, aided by chemists and cooks, have found use for almost every ounce that goes into the stockyards on four feet, but in the vegetable line there has been no necessity to convert to food the coarsest plant stocks.

Trees are great food producers and one need not be a chemist to understand that, since their fruits and seeds have been nutritive food since the world began, a smart chemist can devise a process for converting these largest of plants themselves into food of a sort. The practical value of the process is small, for it is hardly conceivable that in any region where a sawdust converting plant could be operated there would not be plant life of more natural food value than processed sawdust.

A vivid imagination can paint a country

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round
By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
MRS. KAHN IN HOT CAMPAIGN
By FLORENCE KAHN
Congresswoman from California

DEAR BOYS:
I thought I had a great idea: Pinch-Hitters' league composed of those stars, writers, actors, singers, noted and notorious,
who have been doing all columnists' work while you cagey birds lolled on the beaches.

And I was going ahead at a great rate about shortstops and fullbacks when the family censor in the person of the son said:
"You certainly are mixing metaphors. Shortstops are baseball players; fullbacks, football players. Why not write about something you know something about, if anything?" In the home a patient child chides an erroring parent.

I used to look up at the press gallery and wonder what you fellows were paid for, anyway. Dash off a few words and draw a salary. Apologies. Now I know.

RUNNING A CAMPAIGN

Did you ever try to write a column in the middle of a campaign, a fight to the finish?
Or rather, did you ever try to run a campaign in the midst of writing a column?
Come on, be a good sport and run mine. Be "a candidate just for a day."

Have you any idea in these days of complicated living, unpaid war debts (and others), drought, conservation, taxes, trouble in Spain, and a real election fight, what running for office means? And you ask me for something light and humorous. Just can't be done. Ain't anything funny about it.

You know, boys, it is so much easier to write to you than for you . . . for obvious reasons. I never realized before how one-tracked my mind can become; for all I think, eat, sleep, talk and dream is campaign.
Hoping, hopping, wondering, working and now trying to concentrate on this is almost too much even for me, as this open letter proves.

But with this, this campaign is vital, and it is interesting. And one realizes the cosmopolitan character of San Francisco more than ever. A dinner in Chinatown, a meeting with the Slavonians, a most fascinating entertainment by the Poles, a dance given by the Russians.

As my son says: "During the campaign we eat in every language." How you would enjoy it! Sometimes it is hard to believe one is not in a foreign land; but under it all is a real Americanism.

baked beans and boiled cabbage, but a more sensible inventor of drastic conditions would expect an end to the siege before the spruce fritters, and pine ice cream cones.

Chatted with Mack Noggle, the banker, and from him learned that the scenery in vicinity of Scioto Trail Park, south of Chillicothe, is as beautiful as can be found anywhere in the United States. And Mack is an expert in that line, traveling hundreds of miles each year in search of interesting and beautiful places. Gerald Hanley and Harley Betz told of encountering

Sunday, so congratulated myself on having

FLOWERS AT HER FEET

Alix Carey, who came to New York to find work in an advertising agency following her parents' death, had made a close friend of Kathleen Crosby whom she met in a swimming pool. Kathleen, who is well to do, has invited Alix to a party and introduced her to Kim Preston, young executive of the agency. Alix submits a slogan in a $500 contest conducted among employees of the agency. Kathleen and Alix discuss love and Alix hints of her feelings for John Sayre. Alix wins the slogan contest to her amazement and is told that Sayre desires to see her. Sayre is impressed with Alix's idea, gives her a promotion and arranges for her to join a business conference with a Mr. Warner who is opening a new account with the agency. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

"Good girl, prompt!"

anyway, she thought. She lingered over the white chiffon knowing that it pointed up the fragile beauty of her small-boned figure and the perfection of her coloring. She knew also that it was a dance frock and not at all the sort to wear to a business dinner even if her escorts were "wearing black ties."

She decided on the black suit. And was not a little pleased with the result when she examined the finished effect. The suit of heavy black crepe consisted of a frock with a long, slim skirt which fell to the floor in an unbroken line, and a shirtwaist top of finely pleated white sheer fabric with a small mannish tie of black. Over this there was a short fitted jacket with smart lapels and long, tight sleeves.

It gave her height and dignity and accentuated the flowing lines of her figure, the beauty of her hair. She resisted the impulse to add a bracelet but she picked up a huge white chiffon handkerchief and her green bag when the door bell buzzed announcing the arrival of Sayre's motor.

He was waiting for her in the lobby of Robert's fashionable restaurant. They measured each other across the few feet they advanced to one another.

"She has taste as well as brains and beauty," John Sayre said to himself. "Oh, he's divine!" Alix Carey thought drinking in every detail of his immaculate black and white, his easy grace, his white smile under the clipped mustache.

"Good girl," he said, taking her arm. "Prompt! Warner's waiting for us inside." She felt the eyes of other diners staring at them as they walked through the aisles of tables to the candle-light where Warner waited.

Sayre introduced them. "May I order for you?" "Please do," she said. They chatted pleasantly during their meal, sole, roast and sweet and, when the coffee arrived, Sayre turned to Warner, saying: "Bill, Miss Carey has been working on a plan for your product with which I am thoroughly familiar. However, I want her to tell you about it."

Bill Warner was prepared to like anything Alix had to say at that moment, which did not mean that

DIET AND HEALTH

How Old Can We Get? Investigators Say 100

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THERE HAS just come to me from London an old book on a subject that will always be new and fresh: how to live to be old.

For, as we intimated yesterday, in spite of the disadvantages and infirmities of age, we all want to attain it.

The book is Tobias Venn's "Via Recta A D vitam Longam" — The Right Way to Long Life, dated 1650.

For all practical purposes, as Dr. Raymond Pearl has pointed out in his essay on Venn's and the Via Recta, "The latest treatise on personal hygiene of today contains little of any importance that is not in the Via Recta in one form or another, or little advice that differs from Dr. Venn's. To be sure he tricked out his precepts with the orthodox Hippocratic and Galenic rationalizations of his time. The modern hygienist is, of course, not concerned with any such antiquated ideas as 'temperaments.' Instead he has a nice new set of rationalizations all his own. This is as it should be. Man's explanations of enduring realities have always been singularly ephemeral. To achieve success theory must be in step with the general thought of its time."

We need not be surprised then to find that Dr. Venn lays a good deal of stress on diet.

Guessed Correctly
And without knowing anything about them (lucky fellow, perhaps) he advocates the foods with vitamins and protective quality. For instance, on the subject of lettuce he says:

"Whether it be eaten raw or boiled as the constitution of the body shall require, this is certain that there cannot be found any simple medicinal meat, where sleep may be procured, and the unequilibrium of the spirits, and heat of choler appeased, as with it. It cannot be spoken with how great efficacy it doth, being eaten with vinegar, extinguish the burning heat of the stomach."

Of milk he says:
"Milk is of easy digestion, of much and good nourishment; it impingeth and causeth the body to wax grosse, and for amending of a dry constitution, and for them that are extenuated by long sickness, or are in a consumption, it is by reason of the excellent moistening, cooling and nourishing faculty of it, of singular efficacy."

Of roughage (in the form of bran) he says:
Bread made only of the branny part of the meal "doth sooner descend and move the belly—wherefore for those that are healthy and yet subject to constiveness, and also for such as would not wax grosse, it is most profitable."

In other things he advises moderation, as is proper for a hygienist—in drink, in changing diets too rapidly, in not getting too fat, in late hours, in exercise, in getting enough sleep.

Venn's is one of a long line of books on the subject, including Cheyne's "Essay on Health and Long Life", and coming down to Metchnikoff's simple theory (if only it had worked) that using Bulgarian buttermilk would prolong life to 100 years, and half a dozen other treatises on "How to Live Long", published within a year or more.

With the precepts to moderation, no hygienist, in fact no human being, can differ. Undoubtedly they make for a happier, more comfortable, more wholesome life. But whether they prolong life, I doubt, if even those who want to live long the most entirely believe them. And if they really believe in these precepts they would practice them. Moderation is not conspicuous in the lives of those we see about us.

The real facts about long life are those we suggested yesterday. If you gathered a thousand people 90 years old together, you would find that they were about equally divided between vegetarians and meat-eaters, teetotalers and alcohol-users, smokers and abstainers, sleepers and insomniacs, tea hounds, coffee hounds and let-alones, pedestrians and sit-by-the-fires. The only thing they would all agree on would be long-lived ancestors.

Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Gilliland, Dr. and Mrs. G. S. Corne, and Mrs. Ella Hornbeck and the Misses Flossie and Minnie Gardner of Columbus, for an informal dinner at the American hotel coffee shop, Saturday evening.

Following the dinner, the group enjoyed bridge at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilliland.

Monday Club

The Monday Club had Dr. Eugene Van Cleef, professor of geography at Ohio State University, for a guest speaker at its regular session in the trustees room of the public library, Monday evening.

Dr. Van Cleef is a writer and an authority on Finland. His "A Survey of the Geography and Culture of the Scandinavian Countries and Finland" was a story of how the physical position of these countries, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland, make the people rugged.

Dr. Van Cleef was very comprehensive as he talked of these lands bordered by the Arctic ocean, the Baltic and North Seas, and of the people, many of whom make their living on the water. He told of the long summer with twilight merging into dawn, when they sun themselves on the crags; then of the dark winter, when the sun never rises from November to January 24, and they are forced to spend much time in reading.

Although the natives have attained the highest per cent of literacy and are thriving under the new "co-operative movement," yet Dr. Van Cleef spoke of their lives as reflecting a dull existence.

Club business, part of which through the suspension of rules, had been deferred, was resumed. Mrs. Fred Griner appointed the following committees: tellers, Misses Alice Ada May, Martha Mader, Eleanor Snyder; better movies, Mrs. Clark Hunsicker; scrap book, Mrs. Howard Jones.

Registration for the convention of the southeast district of the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs will open Thursday at 10 a. m. in the Presbyterian church, at which place the convention will hold its meetings.

After the evening session on Thursday, the Pickaway Plains chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will give a reception honoring the visitors of the club in the trustees' room of the public library.

Vallee to Present Mascots of Championship Baseball Teams on Thursday Program

LIST OF GUEST STARS RUGGLES, FRAY AND BAUM

Red Barber to Report All of Notre Dame Football Games

Rudy Vallee has booked one of radio's most unusual variety hours for Thursday night. On the broadcast Vallee has a film comedian, a novelty musical arrangement of four pianos, a radio comedy team and a discourse between mascots of the two baseball teams that will be engaged in the World Series.

The list of guest stars includes Charlie Ruggles, film comedian; Tom Howard and George Shelton, who got their start as a team of radio comedians on Vallee's show; Mario Braggiotti, Bert Sherer, Jacques Fray and Charles Baum playing simultaneously on four pianos; Thomas Troy, mascot of the New York Giants, and Mascot Timothy Sullivan of the New York Yankees.

When Vallee heard that Ruggles was in New York on a combination business and pleasure trip, to see the World Series among other things, he signed him for his Variety Hour, broadcast over the NBC red network.

Howard and Shelton, frequently heard on the air with Rudy, have prepared a sketch especially for the show. Thomas Troy and Tim Sullivan, mascots of the competing teams in the 1936 World Series, are both 17 years old. They will give their impression of the series, and if the deciding game has not been played by Thursday night, each will give his reason why he thinks his team will win.

Mario Braggiotti and Jacques Fray were heard for years on the networks as a piano team. Later they split, Braggiotti becoming heiress Doris Duke's private piano tutor and Fray organizing a dance band, which is now playing in New York. Baum later joined Fray and formed a piano team. Sherer is a widely-known pianist. Having four pianos swing through lively tunes at one time is an innovation on Vallee's hour, where many unusual "acts" have been booked in the past. Right now the two two-piece teams—Fray and Baum, and Braggiotti and Sherer—are the leading features of this type over the two major broadcasting networks. The two teams are brought together for the first time in the Vallee Hour. They will play a medley of "I've Got Rhythm", Ravel's "Bolero" and "Yankee Doodle" played in the Gershwin manner.

RED BARBER

Red Barber, whose knowledge of baseball and football has made him one of the nation's outstanding radio commentators on those sports, will be at the microphones of WLW to bring play by play descriptions of the Notre Dame football games this season.

Barber, whose outstanding work on the Ohio State football games in 1934 and 1935 added to his nationwide popularity as a football announcer, is scheduled to broadcast his first game October 10, when Washington University of St. Louis plays the Irish at South Bend Ind. The broadcast will begin at 2:45 p. m. EST.

Last year Barber broadcast the World Series baseball games for the Mutual Broadcasting System and it is possible that he will be on the firing line for one of the major networks at the 1936 World Series. In that event he will be unable to broadcast the opening game between Carnegie Tech and Notre Dame on October 3. In case the World Series game is rained out, however, Barber will fly to South Bend to give a play by play description of the opening Notre-Dame game.

to town, in short the parades make the Pumpkin Show. The committee has volunteered to spare no effort to make the industrial parade the biggest and best in recent years and one of the highlights of the 1938 show. Toward that end we have induced the directors to practically triple the prize money on industrial floats. The prizes are $75 for first, $50 for second and $25 for third.

In Five Parades

"Since these floats will appear in the four night parades in addition to Thursday afternoon we urge you to consider seriously the advertising value in addition to the prize money and community spirit. The committee will be glad to assist you with plans for building your float."

"If you feel you can not enter a float, then put in a decorated automobile. They will appear in the same parades and prizes will be $15, $10 and $5. An additional class for the best display of products of the farm, factory or business house, mounted on a wagon or truck, will parade Thursday afternoon only for prizes of $15, $10 and $5."

"You may use your float or decorated automobile to display the young lady you will sponsor for Miss Pumpkin Show on Wednesday night."

BESIEGED EAT HORSES, MULES

because we lacked the ingredients to make real bread. We never ate for enjoyment, though—just to resist the Reds.

"We kept our spirits up with the radio we had. It wasn't any good for sending but we could pick up the Madrid (the loyalist government) stations.

"When there were any concerts or jazzy music, some of the younger set danced. It was this spirit which kept us going.

"Many times we heard of heavy losses alleged to have been suffered by the rebels, as broadcast from the Madrid radios. We never knew whether they were true or not—and we didn't care, for we were pledged to hold out until not a single one of us was left alive."

Nights Became Weir
The nights, Katina said as his mind drifted back over the weeks of the siege, were the most weird part of all.

"We took turns standing guard," he said, "and cheering up the women and children. They didn't really need much cheering. They busied themselves sewing and patching our clothes. We men did most of the cooking and dish washing."

"There were many sleepless nights, for the sentries frequently woke us to repulse enemy attacks."

Katina explained that he himself sought refuge in the Alcazar two days after the uprising and two days before the siege started, because his life was endangered by loyalists who suspected his rebel sympathies.

He said as an afterthought that one of the most harrowing moments for the women was when the loyalist miners started drilling holes through the thick walls to dynamite the Alcazar.

"We could hear the buzz of drilling," he said. "It sounded like a dentist drilling teeth—ours."

Kept in Strongholds
He confirmed that no women were killed, as the men kept them in subterranean strongholds which withstood all aerial bombardments and heavy artillery shelling, and even the dynamiting.
